Some Remarks about Fall Bulbs

FALL BULBS include those which are set out in the fall, left all winter, to flower in the spring. These are commonly Tulips, Hyacinths, Narcissi (Daffodils), Crocuses, Muscari, etc., and we will say a few things about them that may be helpful, mentioning the different kinds in approximately the order of their blooming.

GALANTHUS

GALANTHUS (Snowdrops). These often bloom while snow is still on the ground. They do well in sun or semi-shade and will add much to your rock garden. Plant 2 inches deep and 3 to 4 inches apart.

CROCUSES

CROCUSES. These may be set out right in your lawn, in small clusters. They bloom very early, and should be set about 2 inches deep. They like partial shade but don't insist upon it. The lawnmower may be used without hurting the crocuses if their foliage has died down. They will bloom each year for several years.

CHIONODOXA

CHIONODOXA. These bloom the same time as Crocuses, with showy blue flowers. Fine for rock gardens. Plant 3 inches deep and 3 inches apart.

CAMPANULATA

SCILLA. Siberica blossoms early, Campanulata later. Plant Siberica 3 inches deep and 3 inches apart, Campanulata the same depth but 6 inches apart. Siberica looks best planted in masses.

SIBERICA

MUSCARI

MUSCARI (Grape Hyacinths). So called because the pointed spikes of small bell-like blossoms resemble inverted bunches of grapes. They bloom in April and last quite well, making fine borders and brightening rock gardens.

HYACINTHS. Outdoors, plant exhibition size bulbs 6 to 7 inches deep and 8 inches apart; bedding size 6 inches deep and 6 inches apart. Indoors, one exhibition size bulb in a 5 or 6 inch pot.

HYACINTHS

NARCISSI or DAFFODILS. Let's not go into the question of which is a Narcissus and which a Daffodil, because common usage and scientific correctness differ. Call them what you will, they are at their best when set out in groups of a dozen or more, and they are frequently used for naturalizing. Plant the bulbs as early as possible in the fall, 4 to 8 inches deep and 6 to 10 inches apart. Paper whites are for indoor culture only, and are usually grown in a deepish dish filled with pebbles and water. Keep them in the dark until plenty of roots have developed, then move to a light cool room. Of the outdoor types, the Trumpets have the longest trumpets, as long as or longer than the perianth

TRUMPET

BARRII

INCOMPARABILIS

POETAZ

POETICUS

DOUBLE

DOUBLE EARLY

TULIPS. The unbeatables of the spring-flowering bulbs. Tulips are divided into several groups whose names are sometimes difficult to explain. The sketches shown are of typical flowers.

TULIP CULTURE. Tulips should be planted any time in the fall before the ground freezes, avoiding locations where Tulips have been grown during the two previous seasons, unless you are planting Botanical Tulips. Also avoid the use of fresh manure at planting time. Plant the Bulbs about 5 inches deep and from 5 to 8 inches apart, to suit your taste, but bearing in mind that they always look best when massed. For best results, you should dig them up after the foliage has died down, store the bulbs in a cool dry place, and reset them in the fall. Many people leave them in the ground indefinitely, in which case they produce poorer flowers each year and finally die out completely.

SINGLE EARLY

DOUBLE LATE. Similar to Double Early, but later blooming,

TRIUMPH

TRIUMPHS. These deserve a lot more popularity, but are a fairly new group and not yet very well known. They bloom a week ahead of the Darwins and right after the Earlies, and include some gorgeous colors with tall, sturdy stems. Try some. "Kansas" is a perfect white Tulip.

DARWIN

SINGLE EARLIES are the first to bloom, most of them about 10 days before the Darwins and Breeders. Their stems are somewhat shorter but satisfactory.

DOUBLE EARLIES. Blooming about the same time as the Single Earlies, these have double blossoms that resemble peonies. The stems are not very tall.

DARWINS. The "old stand-bys," medium late with tall, sturdy stems and a full range of colors. You really should try some of the newer ones instead of continuing with the old varieties.

DOUBLE LATE

COTTAGES. These are also called May-Flowering, but the Darwins and Breeders bloom in May, too. Their stems aren't quite as sturdy as Darwins' or Triumphs', but are tall enough for anybody. The colors are largely yellows and whites with some reds and oranges. If you like a delicate lemon-yellow, grow "Mother's Day."

BREEDER

COTTAGE

LILY-FLOWERING. These probably should be classed as Cottages, but their blossoms have a distinctive shape. The petals flare outward from a rather tight base, somewhat like a lily.

LILY-FLOWERING

BREEDERS. These are perhaps less popular than other Tulips, owing to their having less brilliant coloring. The colors are usually purples, buffs, maroons, dull gold and coppery tones. They are nearly a week later than Darwins on the average.

REMBRANDT

REMBRANDTS. These resemble Darwins, but the blossoms are striped and splashed with a second color. We offer only one variety this year. These Tulips are called Rembrandts because they are the kind he usually showed in his paintings.

PARROTS. With the exception of Fantasy, their stems are inclined to shortness and are not very sturdy. The blossoms are downright startling. They have fringed and crumpled petals, are brightly colored, sometimes with two or three colors, including green, in the same blossom. They are most effective in groups.

PARROT

BOTANICAL TULIPS (Tulipa species). These are mostly from wild varieties found in the Near and Far East. All are early, with rather small but very beautiful blossoms of attractive colors and unusual shapes. They could do a lot for your rock garden.
